A Day at the Beach

Last Saturday, my family decided to spend the day at the beach. The drive was smooth, and everyone was excited. The sun was shining brightly, and the gentle sea breeze made the air feel fresh and pleasant.

We found a nice spot at the beach and laid out our mats under a big, colorful umbrella. From there, we could watch the waves rolling in and hear the soothing sound of the water crashing against the sand. My brother and I immediately started building a sandcastle. We made it big and strong, with tall towers and a deep moat that we filled with water using our buckets.

While we were busy digging and shaping the castle, mother walked around taking photos of us and the beautiful scenery. Father went straight to the water for a swim. Later, we all sat together and enjoyed the lunch we had brought—fresh sandwiches and cool orange juice, which tasted perfect under the hot sun.

The beach was full of happy people. Some were flying colorful kites high in the sky, while others played beach volleyball and laughed loudly. A few children were collecting shiny seashells and tiny crabs along the shore. Everyone seemed relaxed and cheerful, enjoying the perfect weather.

As the day slowly came to an end, we packed our things and took one last walk along the beach. The golden light of the setting sun made the sea look magical. It had been a fun, peaceful, and refreshing day for all of us, and we promised to return soon.

A Visit to the Zoo

Last Sunday, Rani and her family went to the city zoo. It was a sunny day. At the entrance, they got a map of the zoo and started their tour. First, they saw the elephants. One of them was spraying water with its trunk! Then they walked to see the monkeys. The monkeys were jumping from tree to tree and eating bananas. Rani laughed a lot watching them.

Next, they visited the bird section. There were parrots, peacocks, and owls. The peacock spread its feathers and looked beautiful. After that, they saw the lions resting in the shade. The zoo had clear signs asking people not to feed the animals.

It was a fun and educational day for her and the whole family.
